Construction projects dominate CPSD Board agenda

the extensive nature of the dirt work, though he assured the Board that the lighting would be replaced and given new cement foundations.

Financial Director Libby Callegan walked the Board through a number of financial updates, including the removal of a number of dated fixed assets, which Callegan noted would lower the District's present property insurance rates. She also drew the Board's attention to the bid specifications with Munn Contractors, the company responsible for the construction of the video board, as Munn had agreed to be responsible for any damages incurred during the building process, such as cracked sidewalks or other similar damages caused by the advent of large machinery on the high school campus. Callegan then noted that the fee the district pays Kelly Services (the service used by the district to locate substitute teachers) had gone up $2,500 a year due to employee shortages, though that increase would not affect the substitute pay rate.

Schoggin then presented a lengthy consent agenda, which the Board make quick work of, voting 4-0 to approve all requests, save for an approval request for student transfers. Holmes recused himself from that vote, and the rest of the Board voted 3-0 to approve it. Schoggin told the Board that he had met individually with all of the principals and directors in the District and that he was looking forward to seeing them again at the professional development scheduled for July 29-30. He also praised Callegan for the District's recent PERS compliance audit, which had no findings and no recommendations.

The next meeting of the CPSD Board of Trustees is slated for August 10 at 7 p.m.
