on Capitol Hill in support of those Senators who were raising the "legitimacy" question in the Senate in an effort to raise questions about the Constitutional issue among others. The incursion by the mob into the Capitol put and end to that effort. The first demonstrators were welcomed into the Capitol by Capitol Police. Given that Nancy Pelosi rejected the President's offer of National Guard to support the Capitol Police on January 6. The capitol Police answer to the Speaker. Why were they, on that day of all days at half strength? There are real questions the Capitol's lack of preparation and those questions all center on the security decisions that ultimately are Pelosi's to make. And remember that any hope President Trump had of Constitutional questions about the election died when the crowd took over the building, including the Senate chamber.

As in all such questions I ask, "qui bono"?
