Car Concierge

It's Too Late Baby

I was contacted by a person who found my info on the Linked-In site. After hearing his sad story it reminded me of the Carole King song named in the title of this article.

It really was a nightmare for this man and I felt bad because he had a heavy accent and based on his vocabulary I suspected he was not a member of Mensa.

He had two problems: The car he bought was back at the dealership he made the purchase at for "promised" repairs. There was a repainting of the driver's door and a passenger window motor replacement and it was taking too long to get this done. The other problem was that he said the car was advertised for $32,000 but somehow when he went to sign the paperwork it was close to $40,000 and he wanted me to intercede on his behalf.

I asked him how long had the dealer kept the car for repairs and he said two weeks which made me immediately ask how long ago he bought the car. Unfortunately his answer was "a month ago." I explained that it was too late to hire me, that he should have hired me before he bought the car. I explained that at this point he needed an attorney as my experience did not include a law degree.

I asked him if he spoke English and he said did not. I called one of my friends who happens to be an attorney and is Cuban so she could converse with the man. I explained the situation, she said she would talk to the man and see what she could do for him. She explained to me that if he had signed a contract a month ago that the Florida three day rescission to cancel a loan contract without a financial penalty had long passed.

I felt bad for the man because it sounded like he had been taken advantage of. Will keep you posted on developments on this one.

As always be well, take care and read the fine print.
