Year in Review 2021 One for the Books

In Russell County, 2021 was filled with triumph, tragedies and tales - as reflected on front pages throughout the year.

By Wade Daffron
TJ Editor

The year 2021 is certainly "one for the books" in Russell County.

Perhaps the biggest and most heartbreaking stories of the year involved the loss of beloved, local legends.

H.M. Bottom, who served in various, official capacities for the county, and City of Russell Springs, passed away in October.

Larry "Flash" Wilson, perhaps the biggest Laker fan ever (With the exception of Russell County School Board Member Brenda Higginbotham) died in January.

Educator/Artist Debbie Russell left us in March.

Russell County went almost an entire year without a murder - until an incident in the final weeks led to a death, and an arrest.

The county continued the battle against COVID, and attempted to return to "normalcy" as much as possible.

Triumphs, tragedies, and tales abound in the year which was 2021...

YEAR,

Perhaps the top story of 2021 was the passing of local legend H.M. Bottom. At Bottom's widely-attended funeral an American flag hung on a ladder truck cast an eagle-like shadow on the First Baptist Church of Russell Springs.

RCPL Director Lindsey Westerfield with an award naming the local library as one of the best buildings in the state.

RCPL One of Best Buildings in State

By Wade Daffron
TJ Editor

As director of the Russell County Public Library, Lindsey Westerfield thought she had one of the best facilities of its kind in the state.

Now, she has "proof."

Branscum Construction, of Russell Springs, was recently presented the "2021 Build Kentucky Award" by the Associated General Contractors (AGC) of Kentucky.

The honor, widely recognized throughout the construction industry for spotlighting projects exemplifying "high caliber of quality workmanship," was earned for the new, Russell County Public Library (RCPL).

RCPL,
