GOSPEL,

worthy of being preserved.”

The “homecoming style” gospel “sing” sprang from a desire to keep those sacred songs relevant.

“He feared they would disappear from many of our worship services unless we kept them as a part of our worship,” Blakey said. “He knew the songs were more important than the singers - thus removing the arrogance and competition among us.”

The fact 16 amazing acts are part of this weekend’s event proves Tyman was truly on to something.

“The only way the community gospel singing could be successful was to love each other and to love God,” Blakey said. “One individual cannot assemble a choir like this but God could.”

“This is a group of singers, that most weekends, are out ministering but come together three to four times per year to sing these old songs in a Gaither-style homecoming choir,” Blakey said. “These folks are dedicated and very talented singers and musicians that come together for these special events - dedicating their time, talents, and finances while receiving no compensation - to further spread the good news about Jesus Christ and to keep the old hymns alive.”

“We have been blessed with congregations and wonderful people with like minds across the state of Kentucky and I believe God has liked this combination also,” Blakey believes.

He considers it a blessing to have the singing here at “home.”

“This event has been held several times at First Baptist in Russell Springs, but it has been a few years since we’ve been back locally,” he said. “Since this is the first year that we have put this event together, we wanted to start in our home county and present this evening of southern gospel music to our home folks.”

The Bill Twyman Gospel Sing has been held in Bowling Green, Elizabethtown, Louisville, Somerset, Shepherdsville, and Versailles over the past few years.

Due to health reasons, Twyman is stepping aside, but assisting the Blakey Quartet with the continuation of these events.

He said he is thankful for the Blakeys’ commitment to tradition.

“I am so excited about our singing at Bernard Ridge Church of God this Saturday!” Twyman said. “Some of the best southern gospel singers and groups in Kentucky (and Tennessee) will be there. I love this choir and the harmony. These songs have been blessing folks for decades and I can already tell it will be a great time.”

Blakey said a wide range of performers including: Joymakers Quartet, Leland Humphrey Family, Cumberland Thunder, Family Legacy, Commonwealth Quartet, Victory Road, Revelators, Jody Wheeler, Community Quartet, Kenny and Laura Roberts, Jay and Sandra Boyd, New Harvest Singers, The Noblemen, Denise Watts Wilson, The Blakey Quartet, and the man himself, Bill Twyman, with Kelly Cruze are performing FREE at the local celebration.

The Bill Twyman Gospel Sing will be held this Saturday, June 18, 6:30 p.m., at the Bernard Ridge Church of God, 170 Stephens Ridge Rd, in Russell Springs.

A love offering will be taken, and proceeds will go to support the youth of the Bernard Ridge Church of God (BRCOG).

Blakey said widespread interest has been shown for the event.

“Hopefully this will be one of many more in years to come,” he said.
