coxswain driving both 18' and 52' target boats.

It was here that she met her husband, Tim, and they were married and eventually had their first daughter, Chelsea.

After having their daughter, she decided to put her family first and moved from an active duty status to the Naval Reserve.

While in the Naval Reserve and raising her family, she pursued a degree in nursing and became a Licensed Practical Nurse.

She decided the natural course would be to shift her Naval career to align with her new degree and requested to obtain the Hospital Corpsman rating.

She attained the rank of Hospital Corpsman First Class and was stationed at several units on Naval Air Station Whidbey Island, WA - all while working full time as an LPN and helping raise her family which now included another daughter, Stephanie.

Highlights of her Naval career during this time included being chosen Sailor of the Year for the Pacific Northwest Region and being one of the first female enlisted to be assigned to duty on the aircraft carrier, USS Abraham Lincoln - where she participated in a ship-wide immunization clinic and HIV screening for more than 1,200 sailors.

She was also awarded the Navy Achievement Medal.

During Desert Storm, Tim was deployed and Cynthia was juggling her military career, duties of wife and mother, and her full-time job as an LPN, all of which led her to the decision to focus on the family and end her military career in 1997.

In 2005, after urging from her daughter Stephanie, she decided to re-affiliate with the Naval Reserve.

After drilling with a Medical Naval Reserve Unit in Lexington, KY, she decided she missed the camaraderie and idea of service and began discussing the idea of an active-duty career again with her husband, Tim.

In 2006, she was sworn onto Active Duty in the U.S. Army.

Looking for a new challenge, she requested training as an Intelligence Analyst.

After training in New Mexico for a modified basic training and then onto Ft. Huachuca, AZ for Intelligence Analyst training, she earned several awards for physical fitness including the German Armed Forces Badge.

During this tour she was responsible for the coordination and logistics of Presidential, Secretary of State, Secretary of Defense and other VIP visits including coordination with Secret Service, Marine One, State Department and Following training, she reported to 1st Armored Division, Wiesbaden, Germany.

Shortly after her arrival in Germany she deployed to COB Speicher, Tikrit, Iraq where she was deployed for 15 months and was appointed per-Indonesian Agencies.

These duties required travel to Bali, Indonesia, Chang Mai, Thailand, Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia and Singapore.

For her performance on attache duty she was awarded the Joint Service Commendation sonal secretary to the Commanding General.

Medal in 2012.

Her final assignment took her to Ft. Lewis, Tacoma, Washington to the 502nd Military Intelligence Battalion where she was assigned as a platoon sergeant, graduated Joint Analyst-Interrogator Course and was promoted to the rank of Sergeant First Class.

In 2011, Cynthia graduated with a Bachelor of Arts in Political Science - with Honors - from American Military University.

After returning from her 15-month deployment to Iraq, she applied for and was accepted to an elite assignment working at a United States Embassy.

After a lengthy and rewarding training period at the Joint Military Attache School, Defense Intelligence Agency, Washington, D.C. she received her assignment to the US Embassy, Jakarta, Indonesia.

Encouraged by her service, both of the Mills daughters are following in their parent's footsteps. Chelsea is currently in the US Navy and Stephanie is a United States Marine.

EDITOR'S NOTE—A special thanks to Tim Mills for this thorough and fitting tribute.
