

'Beaking' news: First peregrine falcon chick hatches at Weston Power Plant

A fluffy new face at Wisconsin Public Service (WPS) is reporting for a memorable first day. The first peregrine falcon chick of the year has hatched inside the company's Weston Power Plant nest box.

WPS is celebrating a pair of milestones with the new baby on board. This year's first falcon is the 40th chick to have hatched inside the company's Weston Power Plant nest box. It's also the first chick to be born to falcon father Sheldon and an unbanded female mother.

More chicks on the way

There are two more eggs set to hatch any moment inside the Weston Power Plant nest box. Falcon fans can see the latest arrivals, as well as 10 other chicks born in southeast Wisconsin, by tuning in to WPS and We Energies' live nest box cameras.

New chicks to receive names from '92

In a few weeks, the Weston Power Plant chicks will officially receive their names. Each name is inspired by 1992, the first year of WPS and We Energies' peregrine falcon program. The chicks also will receive bands that will allow peregrine falcon researchers to study and track them throughout their lives.

Peregrine falcon program

WPS and We Energies began installing peregrine falcon nest boxes on power plants in the early '90s. So far, 432 peregrine falcons have hatched at WPS and We Energies facilities — that's 20% of all peregrine falcons born in Wisconsin.

This program is another way WPS and We Energies are building a bright, sustainable future. From helping endangered animals and restoring natural habitats, to building new solar facilities and reducing carbon emissions, we are committed to a cleaner future.
