Darling, we want you to know how much you are missed in our lives. I want to thank God for the way you stood by my side as a wife, mother and the first lady of the many churches we pastored.

You know you were the best teacher and demanded the best of your students. You were also the first black teacher to integrate schools in McCormick.

In the latter years of your life, you suffered failing health, and God called you home to rest. RIP

-Love

Bad breath can ruin relationships. No one likes to hear it, but it's worse not to know it. Bad breath (also known as halitosis or malodor) can be embarrassing and tough on those around you. Some people don't realize their breath could peel paint because people are afraid to tell them.

Fortunately, this problem is often easy to fix. What helps? Good oral hygiene, regular visits to your dentist and ruling out any underlying conditions or other factors (such as some medications, diets and foods) that could make your breath less than pleasant. Gum disease can cause bad breath. But you could still have bad breath with good oral hygiene and healthy teeth and gums. The smell then usually comes from the far back of the tongue. It gets stronger when you talk, as your mouth gets drier. Most adults occasionally suffer from bad breath. Perhaps a quarter of adults suffer from bad breath regularly.

If you are worried about bad breath, please make an appointment to see a dental hygienist at Walsh Dental Associates. Our hygienist will find out what sort of problem it is and help you deal with it. Make sure, before you see the hygienist, that you have not done anything to hide the normal smell of your breath. Do not smoke, chew gum or use a mouth rinse and avoid any sort of perfume. This will make it easier for our hygienist to tell where any problem is coming from.

Good oral hygiene will usually be the answer to a bad-breath problem. A scale and polish from our hygienist makes it easier for you to keep your mouth clean at home. Good oral hygiene includes brushing your teeth thoroughly twice a day with fluoride toothpaste; using floss or other oral hygiene aids if the dentist or hygienist recommends them; gently brushing your tongue if it is heavily coated.

A mouth will smell less if it is moist. Chewing sugar-free gum can help with bad breath by increasing the flow of saliva. You might have a dry mouth because you breathe with your mouth open or because you are taking certain medicines. Your mouth gets drier as you get older too. If you smoke, try to give up. You should do this not just to make your breath smell better but also to keep your mouth and gums healthy and to protect your general health as well.

Call Walsh Dental Associates if your bad breath continues despite a good diet and proper dental hygiene. Once bad breath has been diagnosed, the outlook for fresh breath is usually excellent as long as you stick to our recommend treatment plan. Let us teach you how to restore your fresh breath, and you'll be able to smile confidently and securely.
