Business is good in Harrah

Harrah's tax collections are higher than expected, and more businesses are looking to setup shop in the community.

In recent years Harrah's tax collections have repeatedly bested projected numbers.

Tax revenue is important, because in Oklahoma that's how cities fund services for residents and infrastructure expansion and repairs.

Collections of sales tax for the City of Harrah continue to reflect the recent influx of new businesses with collections being higher than expected. Each month's receipts easily exceed the city's budgeted amount of $266,666.

The city brought in nearly $293,000 last month. Before that, $288,588 and $273,150 were reported monthly collections.

To date, collections total just over $2 million, which is nine percent or $173,413 in excess of the budgeted amount.

The fiscal year resets July 1.

A major component of that economic success is the booming Sweeney's Switch district of downtown Harrah.

Among major attractions are the Lumber Shack and Black Raven Irish Pub.

Harrah received an Association of Central Oklahoma Governments grant to develop a masterplan for a new downtown district, Sweeney's Switch.

The grant provided the city with $50,000 used to create a masterplan for a downtown destination that will attract visitors and their tax dollars to east Oklahoma County.

Locally owned and operated dining options such as the Black Raven Irish Pub and The Lumber Shack combined with live entertainment and event such as Saturdays on Main have served as a catalyst for the new district. Additional entertainment and dining options are expected to make the district a major attraction in eastern Oklahoma County.

The widely-renowned Chicken Shack originated in a small gas station near Luther and reinvented itself many times before looking to expand into Harrah and Arcadia.

Much of the charm of the early-day lumber yard has been preserved and converted into large seating areas with the longest bar in Oklahoma running right down the middle of the structure.

Outdoor fire pits are easily accessible and S'Mores Kits can be purchased for use. Ed Gochenour and his crew have quickly converted the Lumber Shack from five days week to seven with buffet on Saturday and Smorgasbord on Sunday.

Long range plans call for adding a second floor to be used for dances, shows and concerts.

Harrah was one of three Oklahoma cities awarded a grant from ACOG. El Reno and Guthrie were also announced as ACOG grant winning cities.

Improvements for the district could include expanding sidewalks, making parking at an angle instead of parallel and adding walking trails.

Downtown isn't the only section of Harrah seeing much interest.
