

Babies on board: First peregrine falcon chicks hatch at Weston Power Plant

Wisconsin Public Service (WPS) is celebrating a pair of exciting new arrivals at its Weston Power Plant. The first two peregrine falcon chicks of the season have hatched inside the facility's nest box. The first chick hatched Sunday evening May 28, with the second chick arriving the next morning.

But wait, there's more

A third egg started hatching the same day inside the Weston Power Plant nest box. See how the chicks are progressing by tuning into WPS and We Energies' live nest box cameras. Falcon fans also can follow six more chicks born in southeast Wisconsin as they grow and get ready for their first flights.

New chicks to soar with school spirit

In a few weeks, the Weston Power Plant chicks will officially receive their names and identification bands. After thousands of votes, this year's falcon class is being named after Wisconsin's most beloved college mascots. The names and identification bands will allow peregrine falcon researchers to study and track the falcons throughout their lives.

Peregrine falcon program

A total of 442 chicks have been born at WPS and We Energies power plants in Wisconsin and Michigan since the companies' peregrine falcon recovery programs began in 1992. That means 20% of all peregrine falcons born in the wild in Wisconsin during that time hatched at WPS and We Energies facilities, helping the endangered bird escape possible extinction.

This program is another way WPS and We Energies are building a bright, sustainable future. From helping endangered animals and restoring natural habitats, to building new solar facilities and reducing carbon emissions, the companies are committed to a cleaner future.
