SPUD JOKE

Why didn't the potato want his daughter to marry the news reporter?

Answer:

Because he was a commen-tater.

SPUD-FACT

A man can survive on diet that consists only from potatoes and milk. Milk must be present because potato does not have large amounts of vitamin A and D.

Just In Case, Rain Locations Planned

Though we haven't had to use any alternative locations for our events, the Potato Days Board has made sure that most of the festival events will continue if rain should occur.

One can check at the Information Booth, located at the four-way stop, to find out weather conditions.

Any event that can be relocated indoors will be and any event that can be moved back outside after rain will be.

Check with the Information Booth for any questions about any events.

Kayla Divel To Host Trivia

If you consider yourself knowledgeable come over to the Main Stage for this event and demonstrate your brainpower. Kayla will be seeing who in the crowd has the answers to common questions.

Friday, August 25 at 2:00 p.m. Kayla will take the Main Stage and host trivia for everyone to participate in. Three rounds of ten questions will be on Barnesville and potatoes.

Kayla has been working at the Purple Goose for five years and the Pitchfork for two. She has been hosting Trivia at the Purple Goose for all four years she has been there. Her hobbies include making drawings and paintings, singing, and swimming. Kayla also loves being on the microphone, and watching everyone have fun.

SPUD-FACT

The French fry is not really French at all. Historians believe potatoes were first fried in the late 1600s in Belgium, by poor villagers who needed other sources of food when the rivers froze in the winter. American soldiers stationed in Belgium during World War 1 discovered them, and since the official language of the Belgian army was French, the soldiers called them "French fries." The name stuck.
