IFB President: Drought poses challenges for farmers, but the agriculture industry remains resilient

By RICHARD GUEBERT JR.
Illinois Farm Bureau President

This summer growing season has brought a whirlwind of challenges for Illinois farmers, from severe drought to a devastating derecho and flash flooding. When it comes to how farmers are faring under such conditions, my friend and colleague said it the best: "It depends on what cloud you're under."

Every farmer's situation is different. How drought affects profitability and yield depends on numerous variables, including crop variety and location, making it difficult to generalize how farmers will end up after this rollercoaster ride of weather patterns.

In a single county one farmer's field of corn or soybeans might look completely different from another's 5 miles down the road.

Illinois closed July with some of the warmest temperatures so far this year with drought conditions spottily disrupted by pop-up thunderstorms across the state. While some areas were lucky enough to see rain, we're not out of the woods yet. To quote the Illinois State Climatologist office, "drought is a complex physical and social phenomenon, usually with no clear beginning or end."

At the end of the day, farmers want to produce a good crop. Drought and unpredictable weather are discouraging for farmers planning for a bountiful harvest, but we are still a long way from the bin. We are hopeful for good, timely rains in the coming weeks.

While we wait for the upcoming harvest, now is a good time to remind consumers to take full advantage of their local farmers markets. Illinois ranks second in the nation for the number of farmers markets, which offer fresh, locally produced vegetables, meat and other food products at affordable prices.

Sweet corn, a summertime favorite, is now available so be sure to grab a few ears to grill on your next farmers market visit.

It's hard to believe the dog days of summer are nearly over. I am eagerly looking forward to another lively Illinois

Guebert

State Fair. Some of my favorite memories are the years I spent showing dairy cattle owned by family friends. Now as a spectator, I am energized watching the youth exhibitors take to the ring during the Master Showmanship competition, which Illinois Farm Bureau proudly sponsors.

Ag Day at the Illinois State Fair is an annual event celebrating all that Illinois agriculture has to offer. This year's celebration will take place on Aug. 11 and is a great opportunity for Illinoisians to connect with agriculture at every level, whether it's stopping by the commodity pavilion for a pork chop sandwich or grabbing a refreshing cup of frozen apple cider and other fresh produce from the Illinois Specialty Growers tent.

Amid the excitement of fair activities, however, Ag Day is also an opportunity for farm leaders to work collaboratively on agricultural issues. Such conversations are increasingly important as lawmakers hammer out the details of the next Farm Bill, which extends beyond the farm by protecting our nation's food supply, access to nutrition and advancing conservation efforts.

Later this August hundreds of farmers and agribusinesses from across the globe will travel to Decatur for the 70th annual Farm Progress Show. This event will showcase the latest agricultural innovations and emerging technologies.

There is no better way to end a busy summer than celebrating Illinois agriculture, whether it is at the State Fair or Farm Progress Show. I encourage everyone to take a day or two to spend at the fair and learn more about how Illinois agriculture touches their everyday life.

Letter to the editor —

School bus safety reminder for start of school year

Dear Editor,

We are again coming upon a new school year. School buses are again going to be on the road, as with all new back to school happenings. I wanted to take a minute once again, to explore school bus safety.

According to the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration (NHTSA), 113 occupants were killed in school transportation vehicles from 2012-2021; 52 were drivers and 61 were passengers.

The NHTSA conducts an annual survey on just one designated day a year. This year, this day was April 25 for Illinois. Here are statistics from that single survey day.

There were 6,428 drivers that participated. The survey shows that on that one single day, there were 3,251 occasions when a school bus stop arm was illegally passed. 1,470 occurred in the morning hours, 295 occurred mid-day hours and 1,486 occurred during the afternoon hours.

I just want to refresh the motoring public on understanding how school bus lights function. Yellow flashing lights indicate the bus is preparing to stop to load or unload children. You should slow down and prepare to stop your vehicle at least 20 feet away from a stopped school bus.

Red flashing lights and extended stop-arms indicate the bus has stopped and children are getting on or off the bus. You must stop your car and wait until the red lights stop flashing, the extended stop-arm is withdrawn, and the bus begins moving, before you can start driving again.

I'm also asking everyone to please be patient. Our little ones are too young to feel a sense of urgency when loading or unloading. They are more interested in saying hello and goodbye to all their friends on the bus. They do not care that you need to get to your destination and are waiting in the car behind the bus, and frankly, neither does the driver. The only thing we drivers are concerned with at this point, is getting that student through the danger zone of the bus while loading for unloading without incident.

I think we can all work together to keep our bus drivers and bus riding students as safe as they can be. Please keep in mind that it's not as easy as we make it look.

Thank you, Dendi Noble
