Brothers

Sterling, Va., in 1992 for the groundbreaking of a 36-hole facility known as Lowes Island Country Club, from which she retired in 2005. She met celebrities, sports icons, politicians, and much to her annoyance, the Secret Service over a golf game. She never asked her staff to do anything that she wouldn't do herself. She excelled in and loved her career.

She married her longtime companion, Gene Brothers, at St. Vincent Hospital, Indianapolis, Ind., on July 8, 1996. He has preceded her in death, along with her parents, and beloved brother Gary Joe Chaplin.

After retiring, Phyllis and Gene adventured to Anderson, S.C., where they met and enjoyed the company of many good friends; she loved to entertain, hosting and attending many gatherings, specifically the Epic After Christmas Party. She had a flair for decorating and enjoyed taking the backroads to auctions, estate sales, and unique shops to fill her home with treasures. Most of all, she treasured her family, traveling yearly to beautiful locations for her sibling reunion.

Phyllis was an inspiration to all who knew and loved her, showing that hard work led to success. Her kindness, generosity and intelligence will be deeply missed. We take comfort in knowing that she lived her life to the fullest. She really did.

Please join us for Phyllis' final gathering Saturday, April 1, 2023, for an 11 a.m. graveside service at Oak Hill Cemetery followed by a Celebration of Life at the Possum Trot Supper Club.

Memorials may be made in Phyllis' memory to the American Parkinson's Association.

Mrs. Eckerty started teaching elementary school in Fairmount, when she was 19. After that she taught at Muncie Grade School and Columbia Elementary in Mattoon. She then went on to teach Kindergarten in Villa Grove for over 20 years before retiring in Illinois. After retiring in Illinois, she and Bob moved to Florida where she taught Kindergarten at Hudson Elementary for 8 years. After she retired from teaching in Florida, she volunteered at Pasco County Schools and the Pasco Fine Arts Council.

Carolyn loved education and had boundless energy to not only teach children, but also gave numerous seminars on teaching and even co-authored a book for teaching methods of pre-K through Kindergartners. Some of her favorite things to do in her "spare time" were knitting and making quilts. Many people were lucky beneficiaries of Carolyn's talent.

She was a member of the Villa Grove United Methodist Church, UMW/UWE, Douglas County Retired Teachers, IRTA, Eastern Illinois Alumni Association, Illinois Kindergarten Association, Illinois Reading Council and the Pasco County Fine Arts Council.

In lieu of flowers, donations can be made to the Villa Grove United Methodist Church, Villa Grove Schools Teachers Scholarship Fund, or donor's choice.

Broken Arrow, Okla., and Kelly Bolt (Fiancé Bob Alexander) of Clinton; granddaughter, Kanoa Brown; numerous nieces and nephews; his tractor and combine buddy Maddox Reedy; and his fur baby Mr. Cooper.

He was preceded in death by his father; and brother, David.

T.G. had a close relationship with all of the Dawson Farms family. For T.G., the summertime was for spending time boating on Lake Shelbyville. In the wintertime was snowmobiling in Wisconsin. T.G. was a natural-born leader but especially experienced when it came to planning outings with family and friends. Anyone could always depend on T.G. to help them with anything they would need. He will be missed by everyone who knew him.

OP-ED

Reflecting on the educator shortage in Central Illinois

By Dr. Kyle Thompson
Regional Superintendent
Regional Office of Education #11

It's that time of year again, time for the annual educator shortage survey results. Each year for the past six years, the Illinois Association of Regional Superintendents of Schools (IARSS) has surveyed nearly 700 school districts statewide on the key questions around the depth and consequences of Illinois' teacher shortage crisis. The results remain unchanging: the teacher shortage crisis exists, and it is unlikely to end anytime soon. Yet, with hope in mind, we move forward actively seeking solutions.

Let us first examine some of our local results from the educator shortage survey. Keep in mind that the Regional Office of Education #11 encompasses 25 school districts over seven counties, representing the largest geographic (in terms of square miles) region in Illinois. Among ROE #11 school districts:

- 95% say they have a teacher shortage problem.
- 89% say the shortage is as bad as or worse than last school year.

- 100% say they have the same or fewer applicants for open positions as last school year.

- 95% Recommend offering additional compensation for staff in high-need subject areas or schools.

- 84% recommend increasing funding for Teachers Retirement System.

- 93% recommend offering additional scholarships and waivers to teaching candidates.

- 100% say they have a substitute teacher shortage problem.

- 79% say increasing the number of days retired teachers can substitute without affecting retirement helped with recruitment/retention.

- 79% say increasing substitute teachers days to 120 per year helped with recruitment/retention.

- 55% believe their district is adequately staffed under the state's evidence based funding (EBF) formula.

Thompson

- 67% say supporting paraprofessionals working to obtain their PEL with incentives helped with recruitment/retention.

- 71% say proactively working with universities to place student teachers helped with recruitment/retention.

Currently, there are over 3,000 vacant positions posted on the IASA Illinois Education Job Bank. Over 130 of those are located in Clark, Coles, Cumberland, Douglas, Edgar, Moultrie, and Shelby Counties. While the teaching profession is not the only profession experiencing a workforce shortage, it is arguably the most important.

We at Regional Office of Education #11 continue to express concerns with State and agency (ISBE) stakeholders. Alternative licensure routes and licensure reciprocity have been extremely helpful. We have had numerous candidates obtain teacher licensure in other states, then transfer that license to Illinois. Online programs from out of state institutions such as Grand Canyon University and the University of West Florida allow for a credible licensing option that is 100% online. Our very own Eastern Illinois University has been leading a Grow Your Own Project and Rural Teacher Corps for many years now. These pathways provide support to becoming a teacher, especially in rural areas like ours. Several local high schools have established Future Teacher groups where aspiring educators can begin engaging in experiences and learning about the profession.

In addition to partnering on the aforementioned efforts at the State, university, and high school levels, ROE #11 has led several successful initiatives internally. We have aggressively sought teachers, substitute teachers, school bus drivers, and paraprofessionals through numerous recruitment efforts. We have traveled to our seven counties to register substitute teachers on the spot, participated in speaking engagements to school districts and civic organizations when asked, and produced videos highlighting our local teachers and encouraging those interested to be a teacher, to name a few. On numerous occasions I have testified before House and Senate education committees in Springfield to champion legislation that would best serve the students, school districts, and communities of East Central Illinois. Perhaps our greatest effort has been ROE #11 Future Teacher Nights hosted at our office where prospective teachers can come and meet with representatives from a variety of universities to learn about which path may be the best for them.

When speaking to groups, I continue to state my belief that teaching remains the greatest profession that exists. That said, we need help. We need more teachers. Not only do we need more teachers, we need more substitute teachers, paraprofessionals, school bus drivers, food service, and maintenance staff. If you or someone you know is interested in becoming a teacher, please reach out to our office at 217-348-0151.
