Battalion Chief Wade Watson with the Decatur Fire Department said in a statement Monday morning that the fire was under control and a fire crew remains on the scene monitoring hot spots.

A statement issued early Monday afternoon by ADM said: "On Sunday, Sept. 10 at approximately 7:11 p.m., there was an explosion at the East Plant within ADM's industrial complex in Decatur. Five employees remain in the hospital receiving treatment for their injuries, and our priority is providing our injured colleagues and their families support.

"The main fire was extinguished overnight, and we are continuing to closely monitor and assess the extent of the damage to the complex as we investigate the cause of the incident.

"The East plant, which produces soybean oil and white flake for soybean protein production, is down at this time, and the adjacent corn processing plant is also temporarily down until we can safely resume operations."

The Decatur Herald & Review reported that U.S. Rep. Nikki Budzinski, D-Springfield, called for an "expedited" but "thorough" investigation of the Sunday evening blast that sent a half-dozen workers at Archer Daniels Midland's East processing plant to the hospital.

The Sunday night explosion at ADM wasn't the first of this year. According to the Herald & Review, two weeks ago, emergency crews responded to a fire in the feed house of the company's East Plant. Two firefighters were hospitalized. In April, three workers were injured following a dust explosion in one of the grain elevators of the company's West Plant.
