FAITH CAN MOVE MOUNTAINS

"Laughter is the shortest distance between two people." -Victor Borge

The First Laugh

We often hear about the "last laugh," as in someone "having the last laugh," which is usually about revenge or retaliation for some trick played on us, but we don't hear much about the first laugh. When children laugh for the first time, it is usually because they see something unexpected, such as a funny face or a face that comes out of nowhere, as in the game of peekaboo. The Navaho believe that when children laugh for the first time they have finally entered the physical realm and left the spiritual realm. The person who made the baby laugh is expected to provide a meal for the family and there is a special ceremony to celebrate the baby's entry into the family and the physical realm. Laughter indicates that one is engaged with others; you have to pay attention to people to understand their humor and you can often tell when people aren't listening (or understanding) when they don't laugh at your jokes. In bilingual settings, you'll often see that those who don't understand the second language will not "get the jokes" or the double meanings necessary to understand certain types of humor. Which brings us to the point of all this: human connection. When we laugh with others we are celebrating the shared meaning of our stories and our jokes. It's important to do this, and if you find that you aren't laughing with the people you love, try to figure out why.
