

Saturday's Lace Up for Limb Loss fund-raiser was very successful, according to Katie Henderson, local organizer. There were "Little Laps" for students, kindergarten through fifth grade, and then a one mile walk for anyone wanting to help raise money for Camp No Limits as well as the local track and field team. More than 55 people were registered for the event and raised more than enough to give at least five scholarships to kids at Camp No Limits as well as a nice donation to Green County Track and Field, according to Henderson.

Runners in the primary students' race were off to a good start. They raced around the quarter-mile track one time.

Henderson said, "We had over 55 participants with 15 of those being kids in the Little Laps. I am very appreciative of the help from Grant Karnes and the Green County Track and field athletes. Also, a huge thank you to Dan Hedgespeth and Pam Deaton with Hedgespeth Branding for working with me on our awesome shirts and medals." Henderson went on to express appreciation to the sponsors and to Kasey Gordon for donating water for the event. Henderson's current students who participated this year are Caroline Hedgespeth, Cami Walker, Rilee Sutherland and Haysten McGaha.

Intermediate school students were pumped and ready when it was their turn to race around the track.

Shae and Victoria Jones register for the Lace Up for Limb Loss one mile walk Saturday morning at Dragon Stadium. Victoria is a former kindergarten student of Katie Henderson.

The day's activities help to raise money for Camp No Limits to give young people who have experienced limb loss or limb difference the opportunity to attend a camp geared especially for them. It also raises money for the Green County Track and Field teams.

"I am thankful and blessed to be able to hold this event for three years and still participate myself. I had five of my own students from this year's class participate and numerous former students. I appreciate their love and their parents' support. I plan to return in April 2027 for the next event."
