Operations began that fall in the E. J. Milby Building on Columbia Road, where the first eight women were hired and placed into training. The company,

Sears soon became one of the company's largest customers, purchasing uniforms and workwear produced in both Greensburg and Edmonton. Their

In 1997, one of Europe's leading manufacturers of work uniforms and protective apparel named British Faithful Group purchased the parent company. After 35 years in Greensburg, they adopted a new name, Topps Safety Apparel Inc., to reflect a focus on flame resistant safety clothing. The Greensburg plant produced protective garments for fire departments, rescue squads, ambulance services,

The final chapter came in 2005, when Topps announced it would close the Greensburg plant by October, noting the decision was driven by global economic pressures. Though the doors eventually closed, Edmonton Manufacturing, and later Topps Safety Apparel, made its products with skill and pride. The plant helped to support local families, strengthened the industrial park, and connected Greensburg to customers and industries far wild once a day for 30 days. Participants shared that their connection to nature and doing things in nature created a significant increase in happiness and health. People who spend more time outside can experience greater self-esteem, less stress, increased memory retention, and more positive body image. Natural environments also lower activity in the rumination area of the brain, decreasing negative, repetitive thoughts. Also, those who are outside more tend to be engaging in physical activities, and exercise directly correlates to better mental health.
