Special to The Clinton Courier

Robert A. Hampton, III, of Clinton High School recently completed the Youth Leadership Jackson (YLJ) program, a leadership development program which trains, motivates and increases the awareness of selected high school students through leadership training, community-oriented seminars and interaction with leaders who model exemplary citizenship and service to community. YLJ is designed to expose young leaders to the various elements forming a strong and dynamic metropolitan area.

Program organizers say many high school students are unaware of metro Jackson (Hinds, Madison and Rankin counties) challenges and growth opportunities for their future, and the program is designed to develop young leaders who are committed to positively impacting the Jackson metropolitan area and who aspire to become future civic and business leaders.

Hampton has also served as a page for the Mississippi House of Representatives and completed the inaugural United States Department of Agriculture (USDA) Arborist Training Program.
